Manufacturers Urging Preparedness To Keep Future Peace

Liaison In Postwar Between Industry And Military Is Essential

Close liaison between America's manufacturers and its armed forces after victory to maintain the peace is being urged today by two of the nation's top industrialists.

Whatever statesmen may devise by way of a world security organization, we should make sure that never again are we caught unprepared to defend ourselves, according to K. T. Keller, president of Chrysler Corp.

Urging the continuation in peace of the "know-how" and practical teamwork between industry and the military which, when they got under way after Pearl Harbor, armed and equipped America mightily, Mr. Keller advocates peacetime research and development, coordination of military science and manufacturing skills.

Speaks as American

Speaking "neither as internationalist nor isolationist, pacifist or war-monger, but as an American," Mr. Keller holds that "world security, which means our own, will be based on the supremacy of the weapons of the future."

Similarly Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., chairman of General Motors, is speaking for "unceasing application of the day-to-day developments of science and industry" to the improvement of war material and methods of manufacture, "so that American industry shall ever be ready to set in motion quickly, if needed, its vast powers of mass production for war with minimum changes in plant and machinery."

The cost of war in human life and in material values might have been importantly reduced and the war shortened if we had been better prepared, according to Mr. Sloan.

Revolution Girl Scouts Cookie Quota Reached

Selling a total of 424 boxes of cookies during the annual Girl Scout cookie sale, Revolution scouts sold more than their quota. Profits from the sale will be used for improvements of both permanent and day camps.

Scouts selling the largest number of boxes were Pat Saunders, 23 boxes; Peggy Campbell, 22; Nancy Powers, 22; Rachael Ingold, 20; Jaynell Martin, 20; and Exie Walker, 19.

It's Crazy But True

A hit on their tank by a German shell saved the lives of Pvt. Casey Kucharski, Buffalo, N. Y., and Capt. Chester Orton, Oakdale, Calif., of the 14th Armored Division tank battalion in Germany recently. "Casey's Coffin," the M-4 the men were in, had bumped into a German Mark IV and an 88 anti-tank gun. They got the tank, but the anti-tank gun put a shell into the turret of the "Coffin," setting it afire. The burning oil and paint soldered the hatches shut and the tankers were trapped in what seemed to be a blazing funeral pyre. At that moment, "Casey's Coffin" seemed a much too appropriate title to Casey Kucharski. A split second later, the zealous Nazi gunner sent another shell zooming into the flaming tank. The concussion from the strike of the second shot blew the hatches open. "I hate to think of what would have happened if that second shot hadn't hit us," Kucharski declared. "I wouldn't be here to tell the tale."

Permanent Peace Responsibility Of All Dr. Pfaff Tells Club

"Each individual must believe in, talk, feel and live peace," declared Dr. Eugene Pfaff, chairman of the Southern Council of International Peace, in his talk at Revolution Community club meeting, Friday night, April 6.

Speaking on the topic, "Where we are With Peace Terms," Dr. Pfaff emphasized the fact that world peace is good sense, good business and good religion. He mentioned some of the bricks in a firm foundation of peace:

1. World police and fire department;
2. Co-operation in lowering tariff;
3. Education;
4. Agreement between countries;
5. Equal participation of countries in air travel.

Flowers for the club room were given by Mesdames W. F. Johnson, W. J. Darby, J. T. Hinshaw, W. J. Marshburn and Jack Cox.

Six Boys Win In 10th Annual Bible Story Telling Contest

Sponsored By Boys' Department Of The Cone Memorial Young Men's Christian Association

Winners in the tenth annual Bible story telling contest sponsored by the Boys' department of Cone Memorial YMCA, which was held last week in the Y auditorium were Richard Shepherd, Arnold Culbreth Jr., and Buddy Bryant, first, second and third places respectively for the junior group, and Wayne Crabtree, Van Berkman and Billy Wright, first, second and third places for the intermediate group. Grady Tucker and Roy Smith were also contestants. The eight boys who participated in the finals were winners in elimination contests held earlier. Judges for the finals were Rev. B. A. Sisk, chairman; Rev. Neil Armstrong, Harrison Hussey, Walter L. Thornburg and Mrs. Maude Hicks.

All stories were chosen by the boys and told in their own language. Some of the stories selected were "A Boy Who Was Saved and Later Saved a Nation," "The Baby Moses," "Nathan's Visit to Elisha," "Three Men find a Great Friend," "The Crucifixion and Resurrection of Our Lord," "Samson, a Strong Man" and "A Little Man Who Made a Great Decision." Judges found choosing winners difficult because of the excellence of presentation of all the stories.

Prizes were a Bible, first; New Testament and Psalms, second, and New Testament, third. They were presented by A. S. Arnold, general secretary of Cone Memorial Y, who introduced the Bible story telling hour and contest ten years ago upon returning from his trip to Palestine.

Bible story telling hour is held each Saturday morning at Proximity and White Oak branches of the YMCA with members of the local ministerial association conducting. Attendance at these meetings has grown considerably during the 10 years since they began.

Theater Tickets To Be Given For Useful Clothing Donations

Special Children's Matinee
Part Of City-Wide Drive

For the benefit of the Greensboro United National Clothing collection a special children's matinee featuring Universal's film, "Here Come the Co-Eds," starring Abbott and Costello, will be held at the Carolina theater tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, according to an announcement by Eugene A. Hood, general chairman of the clothing collection drive. The local drive is under the auspices of the President of the United States and is a part of United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation work.

Children under 16 years of age may secure tickets to the matinee at any Greensboro fire station in exchange for donations of one article or more of wearable clothing. It is suggested that the children deliver the clothes to the fire station nearest their homes.

The matinee is only a part of the local clothing collection program which will extend throughout this month to help provide clothing for people in war-torn areas abroad. City-wide house-to-house collection will be made Sunday, April 15, beginning at 1:30 p. m.

"It has been reported that more than 30,000,000 people in liberated countries of Europe alone are in desperate need of clothing, shoes and bedding, while more than four times that number—125,000,000 in all—are destitute," declared Chairman Hood.

As to the case of the victims of Japanese aggression, Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, following his inspection of the Leyte area, reported:

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS —BY JAMES PRESTON—

A businessman in Congress—Rep. Frank W. Boykin of Alabama—has introduced three bills to encourage American inventiveness. Chairman of the House Committee on Patents, Boykin is sponsoring the bills to carry out recommendations of a commission appointed by the White House.

Boykin, whose interest have included farming, livestock, real estate, timber, and naval stores, knows the benefits of American inventiveness to all these fields. In Congress since 1935, his quick smile and hearty good nature has won many friends in Washington. Now he is using his business knowledge and political influence to improve the patent laws.

His major bill would require the recording of all agreements relating to patents. The Alabama holds that such recording would help combat monopoly, and, by bringing all such agreements into the open, tend to remove unjustified suspicion often attached to legal and beneficial patent agreements.

A second measure provides for public registration of patents available for licensing, and a third would shorten the 17-year term of a patent if there is excessive delay between application and granting. Boykin's bills, with minor exceptions, are what patent experts in the National Association of Manufacturers have advocated.

Wide experience in business has qualified the big Alabama to speak for businessmen. Admitting that the patent laws need some amendments, he holds that patents encourage invention, and that invention not only creates jobs, but makes work easier.

Asks $49,999 Cut

This week's man-bites-dog story is on Frank Phillips, chairman of Phillips Petroleum company, who asked his Board of Directors to reduce his $50,000 annual salary to $1 a year.

Mr. Phillips said he didn't see why the firm "should pay out $50,000 a year and benefit me by only $309.36." That's what his year's pay on top of his other income shrinks to after federal and state taxes.

Our Military Policy Saves Lives

Representatives of various organizations and agencies which have been taken to the battle fields make a very significant statement in their reports after returning to this country. This statement should be very gratifying to mothers, fathers and other loved ones of the boys doing the fighting. It is to the effect that the protection of life and limb is the primary consideration of our military leaders. Quite frequently greater progress could be made in a shorter period of time through the sacrifice of the fighting men. However, it appears to be the policy of our generals and others who plan the campaigns to try to make as much progress as possible through the use of guns, planes and other fighting equipment and supplies.

As an illustration, on several occasions on the western front, break-throughs could have been made long before they actually were by sending thousands of soldiers through passes and other spots where they would have been mowed down by enemy fire. To avoid this, our military leaders used big guns, planes, etc., to absolutely break the backbone of the enemy's resistance before sending troops through. We had on hand sufficient soldiers to carry out the break-throughs even after sacrificing thousands of lives, but as stated before, that is not the policy being used by our military leaders, and we should all be very grateful.

It is our opinion that considering the size of the campaign, the ground gained and the type of military machine we have been fighting, there have been less proportionate casualties than in any other war. We will go further and state that it is our opinion that our American experiences in that respect on the western front have been more favorable than that of any of the other fighting nations.

These supplies and equipment that have been sent across from this country have, of course, made possible that type of military strategy. Unfortunately, however, it is an established fact that on numbers of occasions greater progress could have been made and more human lives could have been saved if we had had more equipment and supplies available for fighting forces. In fact, it is safe to state that if our factories making military equipment and supplies had been able to have increased their production to the maximum possible limit, the war probably would have already been over. The above statement means that if the attendance at work had been better, more lives would have been saved and the war would have probably already been concluded.

The appeal, therefore, for an early end of the war and the appeal to save as many lives and limbs as possible is a direct appeal to each and every person, whether he be a sweeper in the plant or the chief executive, to put forth every effort to increase production to the limit. This is truly a war of machinery and supplies, and when machinery and supplies are lacking, lives and limbs are lost.

Our Jobs --

Here we are in an attractive city and fertile country side. No bombs fall among us, no artillery or machine gun fire turns our blood cold as we search desperately for protection.

In spite of shortages, we eat the best food in the world. We live in houses better than people in our circumstances could dream of in most other parts of the world. We drive cars which would make foreign workers believe us all wealthy. In short, we enjoy better living than any people in history.

No one makes us work. We spend what we please, where we please. And we often save to invest in our own land or our own business. Even under war-time regulations we have little "bossing".

We want to continue this life. We want to make it even better. We want to be worthy of every brother, son, husband, or sweetheart who is fighting for our rights. We can do no less than to keep working, every day we can, and help others to keep working, to produce the goods and earn the wages and continue the freedom of the American way of living.

Dud Pickard's fine Rankin baseball team got off to a good start last Thursday in downing Monticello, 10-2. Big Gene Caviness handled the mound duties. Dude has been running his team through drills every day almost for the past month, and he says he has hopes for the coming baseball year of winning the County championship.

Dude, in the past years has coached the White Oak team and has guided them to many championship finals. He also pitched for them. He has brought up such players as Red Stevens, a first baseman, who is now trying out for the Greensboro Patriot team, and is giving his rivals a lot of competition. Another is "Scabley" Mitchell, short stop, who was really a slugger for White Oak, and played for years with the Bi-State league. Scabley is also trying out for the Greensboro team under the leadership of manager Wes Ferrell, a big league pitcher a few years ago.

While we are on the subject of baseball, let's take a look at the Whirlies this year. Jack Elkins, a local boy from Proximity, is now holding the catching duties for Coach Bob Jameison this year. Jack, a three letter man, has participated in basketball, and has made first string in every one of them. His team mate, Larry Dempsey, now pitching for the Whirlies also is a three letter man.

The Cone Y. tennis courts opened with a bang last week, and the courts were crowded with youngsters, who were eager to learn the game.

Among the many boys who were up there was little Fletcher Clay, last year boys champion, swatting the ball hard as ever, and Tommy Ward defending men's championship also.

The courts are in fine shape, thanks to Mr. L. H. Bell, physical director, who has put a lot of time and work on the courts. Among the prospects for the coming season were Richard Spivey and Billy Foust, who were hitting the ball as good as the rest of the players. So if you want to learn the game, just come right on out good and early this season.

Seeks To Lower Postwar Taxes

Rep. Dan Reed (N.Y.) has taken the first step in Congress to reduce federal taxes after Germany's defeat, with a resolution to lower the present 95 per cent excess profits tax to 50 per cent.

The resolution, which also calls for outright repeal of the excess profits tax after defeat of Japan, authorizes a horizontal cut of 20 per cent in individual income taxes at that time.

Acting after a two-year study of taxation in its relation to business recovery, made by the 25-member post-war tax study committee of which he is chairman, Rep. Reed declared:

"Businessmen are anxious to reconvert as soon as possible. We find them of the opinion that they cannot reconvert without a clear knowledge of what taxes they may expect.

Science Assures Economy Of Plenty

Advances in the field of natural science assure eventual establishment of an economy of plenty in peacetime to replace "the 10,000-year-old economy of scarcity," according to Howard W. Blakeslee, Pulitzer Prize winner and science editor of the Associated Press.

"The war," Mr. Blakeslee declares, "has demonstrated the ability of our industry to produce as much of anything as we want." He emphasizes that the revolution from an economy of scarcity to an economy of plenty will be one of the greatest social achievements of all times.

"We believe the country cannot make an economic recovery after the war under the present burden of taxes."

William F. Snow Gets Honorable Discharge

William F. Snow, GM.3c received a medical discharge from the United States Navy, March 31, 1945.

Entering the service in October, 1942, Snow has seen action with both Atlantic and Pacific fleets and in 11 foreign countries. He took part in the invasions of Anzio, Italy and Normandy, France.

Before joining the Navy, Snow worked for eight months in the weaving department of Revolution mills. His mother, Mrs. Sue Snow, is in the spinning department at Revolution.

Danger In Government Job "Guarantee"

Government guarantee of jobs for everyone would result in overall planning of business by persons outside private enterprise, according to Arthur A. Ballantine, former Under-Secretary of the Treasury. Full development of economic planning, he added, is the socialist state.

Declaring that "ultimate consequence of unlimited government spending and risk-taking is likely, to be government take-over of enterprise," Mr. Ballantine added, "It is impossible to see how such an economy can work without dictatorship."

The former Treasury official questioned whether a planned system based on compulsion could actually supply goods and jobs in greater abundance than a free economy, and asserted: "The alternative is the basic American plan, constantly corrected and improved, but still true to the fundamentals of freedom."

THIS BUSINESS OF LIVING

BY SUSAN THAYER

I've been interested in all the talk about whether private industry will be able to provide enough postwar jobs, or whether the government must dream up work for the folks who can't find jobs elsewhere.

I don't even pretend to understand economics, but it seems to me the government isn't letting its left hand know what its right hand is doing. What I mean is, they set up a lot of tax laws and labor laws and directives which make it just as hard as possible for a business, especially a new or a small one, to keep going and employing people.

Then they turn around and begin worrying about whether business and industry can provide enough jobs, and say they guess the government will have to help out.

That doesn't make sense. If the government would bend its efforts toward creating conditions that are helpful and encouraging to business, seems to me expanding business and industry would be able to handle the job situation.

I don't believe any of us like the notion of things being run more and more by the government. The government can, and should, exercise a certain amount of wise and fair regulation. But who is going to regulate the government?

War Prisoners Are Helped Educationally By Y.M.C.A.'s

Many prisoners of war will leave their camps at the war's end, better equipped to face life than when they were captured. Some of them, indeed, may make important contributions to the post-war world.

In their grim struggle to maintain their morale, to grow mentally and spiritually, rather than succumb to the frustration and despair incident to long imprisonment, such ambitious prisoners work with a determination seldom found in civil life. These men are the honor students of that great Barbed Wire University whose buildings are barracks and whose campus comprises the dreary camp compounds on all the continents.

Of special help to American prisoners are the many courses of the United States Armed Forces Institute, designed for enlisted men, but made available for American war prisoners through the cooperation of War Prisoners Aid of the Y.M.C.A., a participating service of the National War Fund. The men are encouraged to register their study preferences with the Y.M.C.A.'s Geneva office, which then sends the necessary textbooks and all supporting educational materials to the camps.

QUOTES OF THE WEEK

"Their stomachs aren't big enough!"—Paul Thompson, Clinton, Ind., farmer, telling Senator why hogs won't eat distillery mash.

"Do you wish to permit an interruption of war production in wartime as a result of this dispute?"—NLRB question on which soft coal miners voted 208,718 yes, 25,156 no.

"I don't like the word 'bonus'."—Sen. Guffey, Pa., introducing bill for year's pay to veterans.

"Security through government ends ultimately in some degree of individual slavery."—Dr. Alfred P. Haake, econ.

"Key to fullest possible postwar employment must lie in expansion of the sales, service and distribution field."—American Legion's national employment committee.

"I'm a member of the Hitler Youth!"—52-year-old German soldier captured by GIs in Frankfurt.

Some of these men also discover their true relationship to the Source of Life and to their fellows, and the YMCA assists in this spiritual reevaluation, regardless of race or creed.

To Meet Postwar With New Designs

The Chesapeake and Ohio Railway will meet competition in postwar as it did before, through development of more efficient technology, design and methods, according to C. E. Newton, president.

The C. and O., with eight other railroads, sponsored development by General Electric Co., of a new type of boiler. With five other railroads and three coal producers it joined in supplying an initial fund for a long-range research program for a more efficient coal-burning locomotive.

Appreciates His Town's Equipment On Iwo Jima

When the bloody battle of Iwo Jima was over, Lt. Col. Michael C. Sodano felt mighty appreciative toward his home town of Canton, Mass.

Despite record revenues last year of $216,536.248, Mr. Newton pointed out, net income after taxes and charges was 12.81 per cent below 1943, due to an increase in operating and labor costs.

and to the Tobe Deutchman Co., manufacturers of radio apparatus there, he wrote:

"The struggle here on Iwo is not an ordinary one... Men and equipment are being subjected to the most terrifying fire from all types of weapons known to the enemy. Our communications have been excellent, thanks to industries such as yours."
